From the New York Tribuno. A Strange Lawsuit.

Rosevelt of the Supreme Court, while it exhibits human nature under some of its most digusting aspects, conveys at the same time, some important moral lessons.

The plaintiff in this case was Carolina M. Quimby, at the time it was commenced a wife, or at least under bonds of marriage from which, however, within a few weeks passed she is said to have been released by the death of her husband. She is still young, not above twesty-four, the mother of three children, and described as of great personal beauty, modest demeanor, and very winning manners. She possesses in her own right, a property of near one hundred thousand dollars held for her by a trustee, and should a suit new going on to set uside the saide the results the control of the cont should a suit now going on, to set aside the kins few are found; the devil and oil of his tups have will of her grandfather, succeed-by which bot you with the tears of mothers and children you have will his property was given to certain charita | rob them of the blessing that god has giv them you has

The Hon, Thomas Ewbank, in a letter t the National Intelligencer, communicates some interesting information in relation to recent discoveries in the excavation of Peruvian tumuli. It was received by Mr. Ewbank, from W. Evans, Esq., engineer of the Africa and Tacna Railroad, in Peru. Mr. Evans states that in making excavations for the railroad at Africa, hundreds of graves are demolished, in which are numerous Indian reland as the soil is loose sand, and as the work proceeds, everything from the top comes sliding down-dead Indians, pots, kettles, arrow heads, &c. Mr. Ewbank thinks the weight of the entire shroud must have been eight or nine pounds, and had it been preserved, would have been the finest specimen of sheet gold that we have heard of since the time of the Spanish conquest. In some eloquent remarks upon the preservation of souvenirs of the departed, and the futility of attempting to secure the great dead from contact with their native earth, Mr. Ewbank says it is the form or features and not the of preparing a Premium List, and appointi preserved, and adds:
